

ETHOS newsletter

June 2026

A little postcard from ETHOS Lab, as we drift towards the end of the semester. Exams are winding down, our Junior Researchers have graduated, presenting their final reflections on our blog (check it out on our website, ethos at itu dot dk!), and summer is in the air. We have lots of seeds for next semester: more workshops, co-building an Assistive Tech Library, tinkering with film and visual storytelling, perhaps tuning into pirate radio frequencies... Themes of obsolescence, sabotage, and leaning more towards collective and grassroots connections. The lab gets hot during the summer months, and we'll be taking a pause from our open hours in July (if anyone wants to babysit a thirsty plant during the hiatus, you're very welcome to!) Thank you for coming to our events and gatherings, we are always so happy to meet you! We'll be back in August - wishing you a restful, curiosity-filled and (un)plugged summer until then.
